COMMENCEMENT TRADITIONS

Ceremonial mace

In the Middle Ages, the mace was a club used in battle and carried by a bodyguard to defend a person of authority. Its transformation into a symbol of intellectual authority is both a tribute to and a reminder of the civilizing force of a college's teaching, research and community service. Over the years, it began to lose its warlike image and became a symbol of peaceful leadership.

At an academic institution, the mace adds meaning and dignity to the commencement ritual. It reminds participants and spectators that education is one of the most cherished attributes of a free and democratic society. When the ceremonial mace is present, the authority of the college is present, and the use of the mace is reserved for occasions of outstanding importance.

Bearing the mace is a position of honor. At Metropolitan Community College, the honor is conferred to a faculty member at each commencement in recognition of teaching excellence by all faculty at the College.

Academic attire

The history of academic dress reaches far back into the early days of the oldest universities. A statute of 1321 required that all "Doctors, Licentiates and Bachelors" of the University of Coimbra wear gowns. In England in the second half of the 14th century, the statutes of certain colleges forbade "excess in apparel" and prescribed the wearing of a long gown. The hoods worn primarily by those holding a doctorate were once functional; their purpose was to protect the wearer from the weather and for warmth in poorly heated buildings and classrooms.

While European institutions continue to show great diversity in their specifications of academic dress, American colleges and universities generally have adopted the Intercollegiate Code for Academic Costumes. This code specifies design characteristics of gowns, hoods, caps and tassels, including pattern, material, color, trimmings, etc.

For all academic purposes, including trimmings of doctorate gowns, edging of hoods and tassels of caps, the colors associated with the different academic disciplines are as follows:

Agriculture: maize
